

"A SON OF REST" VERY STRENUOUS

Not M. Wills Works Hard in New Play at the Fourteenth Street from Time He Drops Out of Awning.

HALF-SIZE COMEDIAN FUNNY

Gabriel, Who is Not Big Enough for Two Names, is Certainly Humorous in This Farce, Built on the Star's Vaudeville Character.

Not M. Wills, who has tramped his way to stardom under the managerial guidance of Broadhurst & Curtis, is making the acquaintance of the Fourteenth Street Theatre in a rollicking work called "A Son of Rest."

As the only rest Wills gets is in the folds of an awning out of which he has dropped—quite an ingenious and appropriate entrance—and as for the audience, well, Fourteenth street doesn't go to the theatre for rest.

Mr. Wills falls out to be his old vaudeville self. He is the same old subject for the city baths, with the same old excuses for clothes, and the same old snoring, raucous voice. He also springs some of the same old gags.

He has several moments when he is supposed to be singing. But he is laughed at and applauded in the same old way, and it is but fair, therefore, to assume that he is a "successful star."

More certainly is felt as to the status of a condensed and consummate comedian who worries along with the single name of Gabriel because, perhaps, he is hardly big enough for two names. He, too, is a recruit from vaudeville, but miniature though he is, he is far above the vaudeville standard. His comedy touch is delicate and his droll "impersonation" of a "sacred cat" inspires a new affection for the feline tribe.

The piece which George Weston has concocted doesn't scintillate with wit, nor is it startling in originality. The music is also of an indifferent quality, but this doesn't matter much, since there is no one in the company who can sing.

However, there is a battalion of pretty girls, chief among them Suzanne Rocco, who, in her first-act gown, bears a striking resemblance to a parlor lamp, and the management has been lavish in the matter of costumes.

President Orr Directs Engineer Parsons to See that Precautions Are Taken Against Similar Accident

President Orr, of the Rapid Transit Commission, has been moved by the Paris subway horror to write a letter to Engineer Parsons, in the course of which he says:

"Although the responsibility for the equipment and any accident that may arise (referring to the New York subway) will fall upon the operating company, nevertheless, I wish that the commission should exercise its right of supervision to the fullest possible extent, to the end that every precaution should be taken by the contractor and the operating company to reduce the chances of accidents to the minimum."

It is wished, therefore, that you, as Chief Engineer of the Board, would, at your earliest convenience, ascertain all the facts in connection with the Paris accident, and also ascertain whether, in your judgment, our contractor and the operating company are making proper provisions against a repetition of such accident, or such other accident as may be foreseen and be prevented.

WOOWER ELOPES WITH SWEET 16

Packed Her Trunk and She Flitted with the Fishman to Water Gap.

HE FLASHES CERTIFICATE

He is Here but the Bride's Mother Does Not Know Where Her Child is and Does Not Know What to Do.

Edith Stevens, sixteen years old, of No. 101 West 125th street, left her home on Monday morning to elope with a young man named Harry W. Brooks.

The police have also found the room of the burglar. The address at present is withheld.

In the room the police found goods to the value of about three thousand dollars. They included pieces of all descriptions.

From most of these the silk hangings had been ripped out to prevent their being identified. There were dozens of women's gowns and suits of men's clothes.

Little silverware was found in his room. The police think he pawned it as soon as he got it or sent it to some place where it would be safe.

On a silver-backed half-brush are the initials "N. F. B." and on other articles are the initials "N. F. B." An English grammar of an old print bears the name of "N. Gertrude Witte."

The police say that the burglar must have obtained a lot of silverware and other articles. They are married. I did not see Edith, and I believe she is at the Delaware Water Gap.

CRAZED BY FEVER, HE KILLED HIMSELF

Soldier Who Had Served Under Sam Fifteen Years, Tried to Murder His Sister Before Suicide.

TAKEN ILL IN PHILIPPINES

Went About in Vain Effort to Regain Health Until His Mind Gave Way—Had Arranged to Sail for Venezuela To-Day.

Instead of starting today for Venezuela, as he had anticipated, William Zanders, who served twelve years in the army for fifteen years, has died.

A suicide at the home of his sister, Miss Sophia Zanders, No. 111 Lewis street, Union Hill, N. J., he sent a notice through his brain yesterday, after he had threatened to kill his sister. When he pointed the revolver at her, Miss Zanders ran from the house and made her escape.

It is believed that Zanders' mind was affected as a result of fever contracted while serving in the Philippines. He was a sergeant in Company B, Thirtieth United States Infantry, and for a long time he was stationed at Governor's Island. Three years ago he was ordered to the Philippines with his regiment.

While there he contracted the fever and was finally sent home. Some time ago he was honorably discharged from the service and travelled about the West endeavoring to regain his shattered health. At intervals he wrote to his sister, and the notes convinced her that his mind was affected.

Two weeks ago he came east and put up at a hotel in this city. He did not go to Union Hill until Monday, at which time he seemed in fairly good spirits, but went away without telling his sister where he was stopping. Yesterday he returned again and without any explanation drew a revolver from his pocket and pointed it at her and his suicide followed.

It is known that Zanders had purchased a ticket for Venezuela and intended starting for that place to-day. The dead man will be buried to-morrow from the home of his sister.

POLICE HUNT FOR A CLAP OF THUNDER

Wall Street Panic Stricken by the First Loud Rumble This Afternoon, Because There Was No Sign of Storm.

FEARED AN EXPLOSION

Report Spread that a Big Sky-Scraper Had Fallen, and Streets Were Filled with Curious People—Police Reserve Ordered Out.

A terrific clap of thunder that came without any of the usual atmospheric accompaniments and with a slow approach, created a panic in the Wall Street section of the city this afternoon.

Thousands hastened from the towering buildings along Broadway, Wall street, William street, Exchange Place, and the other thoroughfares in the lower part of Manhattan Island.

In some way the idea shaped itself in the minds of all that there had been a big explosion and that a skyscraper had tumbled down. The report spread
